Presentation

Learning a second language has always been a passion of most learners around the world. The multi-faceted globalised movement acknowledges the need for new models and methods of learning to be added to worldwide education goals for the purpose of boosting the quality of learning. However, the question of how best to teach them and what skills to be taught is largely overlooked. Therefore, it has been argued that Rethinking Pedagogy is a crucial point to tackle the complex educational challenges and to provide learners with educational support. To develop higher order skills, today's learners must engage in real world experiences that have a value and relevance to their personalities and communities through collaboration, engagement in research and writing analysis, and the ability to communicate effectively and to solve learning problems. As a key step for educational transformation, Rethinking pedagogy needs to develop, and to specify, learners' competencies and skills.

Aims of the Conference

The First National Conference on Teaching Foreign Languages aims to bring together leading academic researchers and research scholars to exchange and share their experiences and research results on all aspects of Teaching Foreign Languages. It also provides a premier interdisciplinary platform for researchers, practitioners and educators to present and discuss the most recent innovations and trends about teaching, and to develop learners' competencies and skills of this century.

Subject Fields

Education, Language Contact, Linguistics, Literature, Psychology, Didactics, ICT

Issues

The conference provides the opportunity to explore research in a variety of disciplines where the following trends and issues will be of particular interest but are not limited to:

01

Communication Skills and Collaboration

02

Creativity and innovation

03

Social and Cross-Cultural Skills

04

Ethical Considerations and Plagiarism in Academic Research

05
